

Crisis Prevention Matters at Work

Every crisis situation presents unique challenges. The way you recognize, relate, and respond can have a profound effect on the outcome.

Recognize

Learn all you can about the unique traits, abilities, and needs of individuals you may interact with at work so you can better recognize early signs that special assistance may be needed.

Relate

How you relate to people can impact the outcome of any situation. By using your job responsibilities to build trust and enhance relationships, you can have a more positive impact.

Respond

When challenging situations arise, respond with the appropriate support. It's important to remember that you may need to summon additional help to ensure everyone's safety.

Trent Altman, an expressionistic abstract artist with autism, created the background for this poster. See more of Trent's work at www.trentsstudio.com.